DIRECTORS FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO BE ELECTED

Ballots Will Be Placed In Hands of All Members for Voting

PRIMARY ELECTION IS FIRST

"Who is going to run the Chamber of Commerce?" That is a question that is going to be determined within the next few days by the members themselves.

The Election Committee, composed of J. G. Steinbaugh, Chairman, Harry Goho, C. C. Bliss and Joseph Raube have arranged to hold a primary election, ballots for which will be mailed to all members after the adoption of the Constitution and By-laws at the first Members' meeting tonight at 8 p. m. in the Municipal Building.

Accompanying the ballots will be a roster list of all citizens who have joined to date, and each member is asked to vote for any twelve persons whose names appear on the list. The twenty-four persons receiving the highest number of votes when the ballots are counted on Tuesday, February first, will be declared nominated. Their names will be placed on the final election ballot and each member will then be asked to vote for any twelve, the twelve receiving the highest number of votes being elected. The first six will hold office for two years and the others for one year.

Ballots will be in the hands of the members on Saturday and should be voted and returned immediately. The polls will close at 3 p. m. and all voters to be counted must be in by that time. The count, which will be public will take place in the Municipal building and any person interested in the program of the election will be welcomed by the election commissioners.

CUTTING AFFRAY RESULTS IN ARREST

As the result of a cutting affray at the home of Jas. Rice, 1265 Meldon avenue, Donora, "Buck" Johnson, a truck driver, is in the Memorial hospital at Monongahela, with a severe knife wound across the abdomen, and Frank Simms, bricklayer, his assailant, is under arrest. Simms and Johnson visited the Rice home last night, when a fight started, and Johnson was cut up. All of the parties are colored.

Graduating Exercises of the Most Successful Character

The concluding exercises in connection with the graduation of the Mid-Year Class of 1921 occurred in the high school auditorium, last evening, when the eleven members, whose work during their four-year course has won for them such well merited praise, were awarded their diplomas. The attendance was large and representative. In fact, one of the outstanding features of commencement week has been the splendid patronage shown.

The Mid-Year Class of 1921 is the eleventh to graduate from the Charleroi high school, since the institution of the four-year course in 1912. In the nine years which have elapsed, 247 students have completed the specified work. Of that number, 241 received diplomas in the academic department, while the remaining 6 were granted certificates, showing that they had satisfactorily completed the course in the commercial department. A large number of the above graduates have done successful college work, and the ones at present enrolled in prominent seats of learning are reflecting credit on their alma mater by their splendid work. The record of work accomplished by graduates of Charleroi high is one of which the school authorities are correspondingly proud.

The stage, last evening, was tastefully arranged. The curtain ascended to the strains of the overture, "The Bridal Rose," well rendered by the high school orchestra, and disclosed the members of the class, clad in the regulation grey high school graduation gown, seated on the stage, together with the other participants in the evening's programme. Rev. F. C. Lake, pastor of the Christian church, invoked the divine blessing. Many Berryman, the salutatorian, spoke on "Reconstruction Problems," and her handling of the subject was most favorably commented upon. This was followed by a duet, "O That We Two Were Maying," (Smith), splendidly sung by Miss Dorothy Stroud, 23, and Orman Morgan, 24. Howard Bradley was the valedictorian. His talk was on "Immigration." His effort was excellent and was well received by his auditors. The Crawfords—Clifford, Frank, Lawrence and Edith, children of Captain and Mrs. Crawford, of Allentown, played a selection, "Autumn Flowers," which was vociferously received, compelling the performers to respond to an encore. Clifford is a graduate of Charleroi high, now at Pitt, while the others are students of the local institution.

Dr. John Carey Acheson, president of the Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburgh, Pa., was introduced by Prof. T. L. Pollock, and delivered the address to the class. This was this noted educationalist's second appearance before a Charleroi audience inside of a year, and his effort, if anything, was more generally enjoyed than his talk at the time of his previous visit. Dr. Acheson, at the outset of his remarks, declared that he wished to diverge just a little this year, while in that a year ago he talked to the graduating class, this year he was going to talk, primarily, to adults. The address, in its scope, embraced certain questions which the learned speaker said were absolutely essential, ere a satisfactory condition of affairs would exist. He spoke of the resourcefulness of this great nation, of its wealth, and of its commanding influence, if directed right. Then, he referred to the almost unbelievable lawlessness which existed. "Education," said the speaker, was the means of effecting a change for the better, in this respect. The illiteracy shown in the draft, a few years ago, was cited, showing the urgent need for the enforcement of the principles of education. Character, and education were shown to be the big thing. Not culture, as much as character. Dr. Acheson deplored the fact that but one per cent was being devoted to education by the government, while 355 went for war. He congratulated the women on their right of franchise, and urged them to keep a close watch on the politics of the ward. "Too much attention," said he, "is being given to national politics, and entirely too little to the politics of the ward. It is in the latter that the work must be done, and if we apply the proper principles here, we shall reap our reward by seeing the purification of conditions around us and in the nation." Dr. Acheson, who had arisen from a sick bed to keep his engagement here, talked for about an hour and was listened to with respectful attention.

The orchestra played "Sparklets" and Dr. F. C. Stahlman, president of the School Board in the absence of J. S. Russell, who was detained at home on account of family sickness, presented the diplomas. Dr. Stahlman spoke of the pleasure it afforded members of the board to see the young people leave this institution so well equipped for what confronted them in life, and he incidentally congratulated the Class of '21 on the splendid record it had made. The class picture, a most beautiful one, entitled "Stratford on Avon" was presented to the school by Howard Bradley, and accepted by Dr. Stahlman. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. R. J. Shields, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and the exercises concluded with a march, "The Fox Trail" played by the orchestra.

BASKET BALL GAME PROMPTLY AT 8 P. M.

The basket ball game this evening between the Charleroi and McKeesport high school teams will take place this evening promptly at 8 o'clock in the high school gym. This hour has been fixed so that the McKeesport team can return home on the train leaving shortly after 9 o'clock.

SECURE MONEY BY VERY SLICK SCHEME

Anton Marich, an aged and respected Polish citizen of Donora, a few days ago, made an information before a justice of the peace of that city, charging Harry Lyons, H. P. Lyons and John Budamer, former merchant of the borough with conspiracy to defraud and with obtaining $2,000 in money by false pretense.

According to the story of Mr. Marich the men came to him in January, 1920, and induced him to "invest" in a big land deal near Warren, Ohio. They are alleged to have promised him a fourth interest in 42 acres of choice land for $10,000. The said land was to be platted into lots and placed on sale last summer. This sale of lots was to net returns which would pay Mr. Marich several times over for his investment. Mr. Marich alleges the men asked for an initial payment of $2,000 saying the remaining $8,000 could be paid at a later date. Mr. Marich wrote a check for the amount, which was cashed, and which was shown to the justice of the peace.

According to Marich's story after he paid the money to Lyons he never heard from the promoters for months and when he made inquiries was always given vague answers. It finally transpired that Lyons and others had no interest in the property; that it was owned by other people who were plotting the property and preparing to place on sale. When Mr. Marich was advised of this state of affairs he instituted suit with a view of punishing the conspirators and securing his money if possible. Officers are now looking for the accused men.

During the week Mr. Woodward sold four new Franklin cars.

Over 16,000 Feet of Reinforced Concrete Paving To Be Placed

TENDERS OPENED NEXT MONTH

As noted by an advertisement in The Mail of Thursday, the Pennsylvania State Highway Department is inviting sealed proposals for the reconstruction of 16,137 linear feet of one-course reinforced concrete pavement, 16 feet wide, situated in Somerset and Nottingham townships, this county, on what is designated as Route 181, or the old Williamsport pike leading from Monongahela to Washington. Bids for this work will be opened at Harrisburg on the 18th day of February, and contract awarded as soon thereafter as possible. This is one of the highways promised by the State to the county, although it is not at the top of the list. There has already been awarded a contract for construction on another part of this road nearer Washington, and if the department is successful in securing a favorable tender on the 18th of next month the additional mileage will be placed under contract.

There are other important highways in the county which demand immediate attention, but none of them appears to call so loudly for help as the stretch between Speers and Coal Centre. So far as highways are concerned, the people to the south of Speers are marooned during the winter months because of the notoriously bad condition of the river road.

However, from indications, the present year promises to be one of great activity in road building. The State Highway Department has invited proposals for the construction of 14 miles of highway in the western part of the state, bids to be opened next month, and if all are placed under contract it will add a wonderful impetus to road construction. Labor and materials will be lower this season than for some years, and this fact will add largely to the probability of contractors being able to present figures that will be acceptable to the State Highway Department.

Miss Helen Darby has returned from a business trip to New York, and will soon leave for Kane, Pa., where she has accepted a position as buyer of a millinery, cloak and suit department in one of the leading stores of that city.

IDEA WOULD PLEASE DICKENS

First Free Children's Library in England to Be Opened in Old Home of Novelist.

There is to be opened soon the first free library for children in England in a building in which that lover of children, Charles Dickens, spent several eventful years of his own childhood. It is an idea so appropriate and fitting that all supporters of the scheme must wish for its success, remarks the Christian Science Monitor. The house in question is 33 Johnson street, Somers town, and the Dickens family lived here after they left Chatham, being tenants of the house for five years. From this house Dickens, the father, was taken to the Debtors' prison, the Marshalsea, an incident which afterward supplied his son with "wool" for two of his most famous books, "The Pickwick Papers" and "Little Dorrit."

Dickens is a striking example of how much can be accomplished by a case of real genius under adverse conditions, and it is he himself in "David Copperfield," who tells us what help and enlightenment he got in his wretched surroundings from the few books which made up his father's tiny library. Though small, that library was a rich treasure trove to a clever child. Don Quixote and Gil Blas—each of these masterpieces is composed of many stories—and from Fielding, Smollett, Goldsmith and De Foe, Dickens must have learned the music of words, and the grace and dignity of a tale of life well told.

If his old house now becomes the home of a free library for children who, like him, may have a chance to forget the hard facts of their lives in the works of great authors, everyone who has the welfare of children at heart, must rejoice.

GAS TO FOIL BANK ROBBERS

Contrivance Threatens to Make Trouble for That Particular Class of Society's Enemies.

Bank robbers who make a specialty of attacking vaults with explosives will do well to beware of a contrivance newly patented by Richard C. Roessel of Harrisburg, Pa.

He proposes to provide a chemical defense for banks in the shape of an arrangement of glass tubes forming a sort of poison-gas battery. It may be made part of the gate inside a vault, or may have any other structural relation to the vaults that is deemed desirable. It may even be portable, so as to be placed in position at night, and removable in the daytime.

The tubes are designed to contain benzyl iodide, tear-gas stuff, or any other suitable chemical which, when it expands, is calculated to asphyxiate the robber or at least put him to flight. Bulbous expansions of the tubes furnish containers for the deadly material.

The robber has only to start something by setting off a charge of explosives. The concussion breaks the tubes; out flows the lethal chemical, and the business of burglary interests the nocturnal bandit no more for that occasion.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Beat Them to It.

An Irvington man planted several hills of bantam sweet corn in an isolated part of his garden to grow seed for next year. He remarked to a neighbor woman about the time that "the blackbirds and sparrows had not succeeded in finding his seed corn this year." The second morning after making this remark he found about forty blackbirds, near sunup, busily devouring his corn. He "shooed" them away and that evening pulled all the ears and put them away for safe keeping. The next morning he looked out to see whether any blackbirds were on hand. Sure enough an immense flock was sitting on the ground at the base of the now barren stalks looking at each other and around. The puzzled look on their "countenances," he says, was uncanny in the extreme.—Indianapolis News.

Elevated to Bishopric.

Seldom has there been discovered a more clever and effective device for spreading the gospel than that arranged by wise old Bishop Amator of Armenia. He evolved a scheme which promised the linking of the church with the powerful state.

Catching Governor Germanns in church one day, the bishop slipped up behind that official. A pass with one hand and he had slipped off the gubernatorial locks; a pass with the other hand, and a bishop's robe was slipped over the tattered coat. Before the governor could say the Armenian equivalent for "Jack Robinson," he was informed that the Bishop Amator had resigned and that he was ordained in his stead.

French Hostess Houses Closed.

Because of the small number of visitors to the American cemeteries in France during the cold months, the hostess houses maintained by the American Red Cross and the Y. W. C. A. at Bouy, Perre-en-Tardenois and Belleme woods, for the comfort of parents and friends who are visiting the graves, are closed this winter. The house near Ronchamp, at the Arzonne, the largest of the American cemeteries, will remain open. If the need is renewed in the spring the houses will open again. Hundreds of American travelers who have visited the graves have been taken care of in these small houses, the only quarters affording meals, restrooms or any traveling comforts near the cemeteries.

MEMORIAL TO CLARA BARTON

School in Which Great Woman Taught Is to Be Preserved as Educational Landmark.

"A public school is an institution," the good folk of Houghton, N. H., told Clara Barton, the greatest woman teacher of her time, and one of the best friends to children in all time. "It has been tried and always it has failed."

She had taught at Houghton in 1832, and the fame of her conquests of expertly bad boys had spread. Her pupils were her champions, and wherever their enthusiasm could reach some of the general prejudices against public schools were shaken. But Houghton was ten miles away.

The new teacher took a tumble-down, unoccupied building, with six pupils, but in six weeks the place was too small to hold half of the little Houghtons who wanted, at last, to go to school. It had become—though to no one knew it then—an educational landmark. The old structure where she proved that there was life in public schools will be taken care of for the future.

Since Clara Barton was the founder of the Red Cross in America, that organization took the responsibility of buying the school when it was in danger of destruction, but they could not buy the site. Now the building has been moved and the land on which it stands has been donated.

Burlington county teachers have restored the interior so skillfully that it is almost exactly as it was when Miss Barton taught there.

AS A FRENCHMAN SEES US

Americans Are Gamblers in Business and Careless in Thrift, Is Verdict He Renders.

Half a dozen British writers having looked us over this summer and reported their impressions, a Frenchman, Louis Thomas, is now doing the same thing for the French Copper Weekly, the Opinion.

"American wastefulness is a stupefying thing to Frenchmen," says Thomas. "We are thrifty and even we must admit, availing. Our experts, who co-operated with them in war enterprises, found them alarmingly wasteful, indifferent to costs and imprudent to the last degree."

The reason is simple, says Thomas. "Americans are gamblers."

"They do not want to make a moderate profit, a steady, regular, perhaps mediocre income, but, on the contrary, to make a great deal of money in a very short time, to 'get rich quick'."

"They gamble at business—not at roulette or baccarat; but it is gambling all the same."

As for wastefulness: "So many people here have made their money by chance, by good luck, by a flash of imagination, and not by the sweat of their brow, that they are naturally wasteful and spendthrift to an extent which we can hardly imagine in Europe."

"Everyone wastes, even the poor, and particularly the women, who, for the most part do not seem to have time to acquire the habits of economical housekeeping possessed by women of the old world."

Grain Sown From Airplane.

Through an invention to sow grain by airplane, aircraft may be listed as agricultural implements. The new "flying grain sower," says the New York Sun, will plant a strip of 36 feet wide traveling at the rate of 40 miles an hour. The seeds are expelled by air pressure from a perforated metal tube with sufficient velocity to drive them deep into the ground. At the end of each wing a thin stream of white lime or fertilizer is released to outline the planted area. The plane is constructed to make a landing on a plowed field without damage.

Under normal conditions the "flying sower" has a capacity of 640 acres in about six hours. The same area planted with an eight-foot drill traveling at the rate of three miles an hour would take a man twenty-two and a half days of ten hours. It is estimated that 1,000 acres could be covered in one day by the airplane.

Taxes of the Nations.

The tax burden in important countries was computed for the financial conference held at Brussels. Expressed in dollars at the rate of exchange current in the summer, the Nation's Business states it is shown that per capita the United Kingdom pays the highest taxes of $87.90; the United States is second, with $56.60; France, third, with $34.60; and Norway, fourth, with $28.80.

With the income per capita, the economists compared the present government revenue of the latter to the former—which comes nearest to showing the relative burdens of taxes today—is lowest in the United States at 8 per cent and highest in the United Kingdom at 27 per cent. The other countries come in between.

The Cooties.

Colonel Roosevelt told a war story of an Albany reception. "A doughboy," he said, "had just got back home from the war, and he was standing in a cafeteria when a dear old lady in the next chair to his own came over across her pie and said: 'Well, how do you do? My boy went through the war without a scratch.' 'Gee, lady,' said the doughboy, 'spit in the face of his insect powder, will ye?'

BONES OF HISTORIC RACE

Anthropologists Intensely Interested in Discovery of Indian Skeletons in California.

No indication that California was once inhabited by a race of gigantic Indians was furnished when sewer diggers at 100 and 1100 Howard streets, in San Francisco, discovered the bones of an Indian.

Marquez, Cal., uncovered an Indian burial ground, with skeletons measuring more than seven feet.

Several skulls and one well-preserved skeleton are to be given over to the investigators of the anthropology department of the University of California. The skulls and skeletons are declared to be of highly important and scientific value.

Discovery of the burial ground has revived an old Indian legend that an immense treasure of gold nuggets was interred with a body of a chief of the ancient tribe of the giant Indians. So convinced are the residents in the truth of this legend that great crowds have thronged around the sewer diggers, largely hampering their activities, and more than a score of persons have applied to the municipal authorities for positions on the city's sewer-digging crew.

According to the ancient Indian legend, the vast gold treasure was buried in close proximity to where the bones were recovered.

Eight years ago William Altfman, curator of the museum in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, declared that skeletons unearthed near Concord were the most valuable contributions to the scientific investigations of the state's prehistoric Indians.

FIND SHELLS CENTURIES OLD

Belief That Relics Unearthed by Workmen in Oregon Were Used as Ornaments by Indians.

Sea shells about six inches across were uncovered by workers recently at Big Eddy, near The Dalles, Ore., lying at the heads of Indian skeletons. They were decayed and crumbled when touched. These shells showed indications of having been used as ear ornaments. They are of the species of shell-fish commonly called "collops" on the Atlantic coast, according to persons who have observed them, and do not grow to the size of those found on the Pacific coast.

Wonderfully perfect spear and arrow-heads, made of obsidian, a rock found no nearer than California, also were unearthed. All of the chipping on the arrow-points found appeared to be much finer than later Indian work, local amateur collectors declared.

The relics found by highway workers at Big Eddy are an accumulation of centuries, in the opinion of D. L. Carns, city recorder who has lived in and around The Dalles for more than 60 years. He points out that in the hills back of Big Eddy trails worn in the rock may be seen, evidence of the activities of Indians who used these trails for hundreds of years. Mr. Carns says that at Big Eddy the Indians find finer salmon fishing than at any other place along the river and have been making the trip to that place annually probably ever since salmon began running up the Columbia.

Photography 100 Years Old.

This is the centenary of photography. So rapidly does the world progress, so essential a part of our civilization has become the taking of pictures, that it is difficult to realize that the art was unknown when Monroe first entered the White House. Yet in 1820 Niepce, first of all men succeeded in producing what might be called a photograph, a rude impression on a silver plate rendered sensitive by a layer of asphaltum saturated with oil of lavender.

And though this discovery awakened world-wide interest at the time, this method could not be put into general use, and not until 1839 did Daguerre succeed in producing the first practical photograph. After that date the art advanced rapidly, so rapidly, in fact, that before 1850 the daguerreotype was common in every village, in every family. From the silver plates of Niepce to the motion picture of today is a long step, a step which but illustrates the rapidity with which modern civilization advances.

It Did Come Suddenly.

An unusually interesting communication was received by a New York life insurance company from the Dahlstrom Metallic Door company of Chicago. A letter, pointing out the advantages of insurance, was mailed to Mr. Dahlstrom on November 16, 1920. A part of this letter read as follows: "Have you ever thought that your turn may come suddenly? Suppose it did? The answer to this supposition, as written by some unknown person is as follows: 'If died, He's dead. Returning letter and postcard. Can't forward. Keeping doctor. Can use this.'"

Homes That Preachers Came From.

It is interesting to note the type of homes that preachers come from. In the Methodist denomination 66.7 per cent of the preachers come from farmers' homes and 11.8 per cent from preachers' homes. In the southern Presbyterian denomination 47.7 per cent come from farmers' homes and 18 per cent of the preachers come from parsonages. In the Presbyterians of the United States of America 33 per cent come from farmers' homes while 15 per cent come from parsonages.—From Georgia Methodist Conference on Notes in Atlanta Conference.

Water Cause of Gopher.

Gopher is epidemic in important zones of South America, especially the Andes region and certain mountainous territory in tropical South America.

Up to the present no investigations had been made of the water from gopher-infested regions; but recently a study has succeeded in producing experimental gopher in white rats after feeding them with water from the gopher of Salta. These investigations should be repeated on a large scale on account of their great theoretical and practical importance. They tend to confirm the theory that water is one of the most important agencies of gopher.

BURNED SLATE FOR GOOD ROAD BUILDING

"Burned Slate" or burnt slate, product of the coal mines which has been successfully used in a number of sections of the country, received favorable comment in discussion of road building at the annual convention of the Road Supervisors' Association of Washington county, held at Washington a few days ago, and will probably be in greater demand for this purpose hereafter.

Commissioner James W. Walker, in an address to the supervisors, told of the results accomplished by the use of burned slate on highways of the county. He explained that it was the most economical material available and made really good road.

G. L. Sollenberger, assistant engineer of township roads also approved of the use of this material, declaring it made a remarkable improvement over the dirt roads. He also told the supervisors that there was an act in force by which they could secure county aid in road building and urged them to secure such funds.

TO UTILIZE WATER POWER OF W. VA.

A bill was introduced in the state Senate of West Virginia on Friday, January 21, by Senator Stewart of Morgantown, and in the House by Delegate James W. Flynn, of Preston, which is intended to make possible the extensive developments which are contemplated on the Cheat river. The bill provides for the development of water power for electricity.

Advocates of the measure claim that it provides not only adequate protection to the state, but also enables the private enterprises under rigid obligations by the state, to develop natural resources.

The bill provides that the operating company would be required to meet the demand for electrical energy in West Virginia before any power generated from water could be transported from the state. This provision means tremendous possibilities for West Virginia and the bill as a whole will encourage the development of both larger rivers and smaller streams, it is said.

RAILROAD CLERKS ARE BEING LAID OFF

About ten per cent of the clerical force of the Monongahela Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Uniontown, have been laid off during the past few months. This policy has been in line with directions from headquarters to reduce expenses.

Funeral services for Davis E. Gamble, a prominent business man of Monongahela, who died in Pasadena, Cal., last Friday will be held from his home in Monongahela, next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The remains are expected to arrive in Monongahela this afternoon.

Many of the medieval Sord churches had fine wheel windows in their west fronts, writes A. R. Giles in the Journal of the American Institute of Architects, but the greater number of these have had their tracery ruined by being walled up in order to put a kitchen glass window in the middle.

More Garbage.
Sunday morning Jean, age three watched her mother prepare a fruit salad. To make it extra good all the choice fruits in season were added. At dinner after Jean had finished eating his salad he said, "I want some more." "Some more what?" he was asked. "Oh, some more of that garbage," was

CONSUME THEIR OWN WARES

According to This Story, Chinese Vendors Are Pretty Slippery Customers to Deal With.

A street vendor who eats his own wares is a kind of novelty to American ears. And yet he exists in China, according to the report of a Y. W. C. A. secretary stationed in Peking, where an industrial work room was part of the equipment of a social service project, a cooperative place of work which was put into effect under the combined leadership of the Y. M. C. A., the American church board, and the Y. W. C. A.

Men who were set up in business as street vendors ate their own stock until the social service workers decided that it was not safe to entrust a man with edible wares," writes Miss Alice Holmes, a Y. W. C. A. secretary.

Nor was this the only failing that the would-be business men had. If the stock consisted of articles which could not be eaten with safety, they consented to sell them, running away with all the earnings. Finally the Americans decided that no man should be set up in business unless he had somebody to stand guarantee for his good character. Under this safeguard an oriental gentleman whose family standing and personal integrity had been investigated, was entrusted with a large stock of athletic supplies which he peddled from house to house.

All went well for a time, for one cannot very conveniently make a dinner of tennis rackets or baseballs. But one fine day the merchant disappeared inside of a certain dwelling and although his companion waited patiently on the outside for many long hours, the salesman failed to reappear. At length the companion notified the police. An investigation revealed the fact that the salesman had gone into the house by the front gate and had left by a rear one.

That he made a thorough as well as an effective get-away is testified to by the fact that the peddler is still "wanted" by the Peking police.

No Great Poverty in Italy.
Likeness of Italian women to American women in their bearing, build and manner of dress, was one of the things which impressed Miss Irene Raber, just returned from a year of recreation work with Italian girls under the Italian Y. W. C. A.

"There is a very little poverty and no destitution among Italian working girls," Miss Raber says. "And they dress quite stylishly in much the same type of clothes New York's employed girls wear. They are not given, however, to gorgeous blouses or silk stockings for work. But although they do not earn as much money as girls here do, they know how to live on much less."

"Nowhere in Italy did I see great poverty. In spite of the continual strikes, no home seemed to be wrecked. Living is not so complicated there as here, and when there's a strike they just go without things till it's over. There's always enough to eat."

The Squire's Dilemma.

Squire L. M. Collis, the genial miller at Orangeburg, met with a rather disastrous accident at his fishing camp on the Kinney which brought a rather abrupt end to his fishing trip. The squire was landing a good sized one in his boat in the middle of one of the deepest holes in the stream when he turned his head to emit a sudden and violent gush of air through the mouth and nostrils. In other words, to sneeze, and his teeth were thrown violently into the stream. His Maryland friends about the courthouse were not quite so cruel as to ask him whether or not he landed the big fish. The squire was in the city today to place an order for another pair and it was a rush order, too, for spring chicken time is here and buttermilk time is nigh.—Maysville Ledger.

A novel window group of the American Museum of Natural History, in New York, represents the life of an area of shallow sea bottom only two inches square. The objects are magnified 25 diameters, and include minute Bryozoa, or moss animals, commonly found on shells and seaweeds, together with microscopic hydroids budding off tiny medusae or jellyfishes, certain single-celled animals, a sea spider, and a colony of acidophiles or sea-squirrels undergoing metamorphosis. The magnifying glass, 40 inches in diameter, is framed with a colored transparency showing the portion of sea bottom in natural size from which the small section was taken.

A Repentant Thief.
H. Thompson, a well-known farmer of Dawsmeire, South Lincolnshire, has received back through the post £175 in treasure notes, which had disappeared in mysterious circumstances. The money had been given to a foreman to pay wages, and the man put the notes in his waist coat pocket. He put the garment on the ground while he was working, and the notes disappeared. The envelope containing the returned money bore the local postmark and the police are investigating the matter.—London Times.

Janitor for 50 Years.
Mrs. Elizabeth Toms, eighty-five years old, has severed her connection with the Tyndale public schools, Philadelphia, of which she was janitor for 50 years.

England's War Gain.
As the result of the war, it is said, the British have gained control over 22,000,000 additional inhabitants and 1278,000 square miles of territory.

Cecil B. DeMille's Production
"Something to Think About"

A picture that peers deeply into human hearts and unfold a wonderful drama made from the joys and sorrows of ordinary life. Strikingly different in theme from anything DeMille has done in the past, but, like his previous splendid successes, sumptuously produced and directed with the genius of a master. WILL SUSPEND WORK AT PLATE GLASS PLANT

The manufacturing department of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass plant will close down Saturday afternoon for an indefinite period. The finishing department, however, will continue operations. The suspension, which is caused by a lack of orders, will affect 450 men. The plate glass market is very slow at this time, owing to the fact that the public at present is not in a buying mood, and consequently demands for automobiles and furniture, in which plate glass is extensively used are in very light demand.

Col. J. F. Bell, United States Engineer in charge of the waterways of the Pittsburgh District, will address the members of the America Club at Donora on Monday evening next. His subject will be "Inland Waterways."

THIS A "WOMAN'S COUNTRY"

English Writer Gives an Interesting Impression of Her Sister Over the Seas.

As an English woman who went about America for nearly three years, making friends, East, West, South and North, I ought to be able to contrast the women of the two countries, but the more one travels the more one realizes that "folks is just folks" all the world over.

American women are quicker at the uptake as regards friendliness and kindness; but the tongue-tied English do just as much in the long run. The American's manners are more cosmopolitan, her clothes are better put on, she has more good stories in her after dinner speeches. But if you compare corresponding types—as most travelers omit to do—they are "both the same color under their skin."

America is a woman's country. The boy belongs to his mother, and most women give their own opinions on all subjects—quite curiously well expressed—without any suggestion of having gone to a man for help.

The Englishwoman speaks more shortly and with a suggestion of having "asked her husband at home"; but I doubt if the Englishwoman is worse off, since England is the home of the proverb, "As the good man saith, so say we; but as the good wife saith so must it be."

One very noticeable charm in the American woman is her quickness in starting conversation with a stranger and her aptness in saying something pleasant at once. I cannot help thinking that if English nurseries and school rooms taught this, it would have widely international results and put more reality into the League of Nations.—Lucy H. M. Southby in the Woman's Supplement of the London Times.

VAST EMPIRE IN SOUTH SEAS

Extent of Australasian Group Under British Rule Is Hardly Realized by Americans.

Judson C. Welliver writes in the Country Magazine that our impressions about the Australasian empire of the future are rather vague, because we are unable to realize its mere bigness. Thus the island of New Guinea, the greatest island in the world, if we classify Australia as a continent, was, before the war, divided between the British, Dutch and Germans. The British have now taken over, in the name of Australia, the German claims.

We think of New Guinea as a considerable patch of dry land in the expanse of the southern ocean, but have difficulty realizing that if it could be laid down on the United States, one end would be at Portland, Me., the other near Omaha, and that it would blot out an area about twice the size of the German empire, and including something like a quarter of the population of these United States. It contains vastly greater resources than Germany, also about a thousand white people and 500,000 aborigines, largely cannibals. Half of it yet remains Dutch, but its predestination to be essentially British is quite obvious.

Australasia aims at leadership in the south temperate zone on lines curiously parallel to those by which Great Britain has become leader in the North. With inexhaustible coal and iron, she is creating iron and steel and shipbuilding industries and a navy of her own. The war era has been marked by the completion of Australia's first transcontinental railroad, suggestive reminder of the beginning of our own Union Pacific.

Mt. Washington 6,293 Feet High.

Many persons believe that Mount Washington, in New Hampshire, is the highest mountain in the eastern part of the United States. Mount Washington stands 6,293 feet above sea level, according to the United States geological survey, department of the interior, but many peaks in the southern Appalachians are several hundred feet higher than New Hampshire's famous mountain. The highest mountain in the Appalachian system—the highest point in the United States east of the Rockies—is Mount Mitchell, in North Carolina, which stands at an elevation of 6,711 feet. The highest mountain in Tennessee, Mount Gayton, stands 6,635 feet above sea level.

Ivory Does Not Rust.

One cold afternoon several school girls were standing on a corner waiting for a car. A man invited them to come into his office to wait for the car. They accepted. The conversation soon turned to the color of a certain girl's hair. One insisted it was red, another that it was auburn, and another that it was brown.

At the height of the discussion two children entered the office. As soon as they understood the nature of the argument, one of the youngsters exclaimed: "Oh, sticks! Her hair ain't red, Ivory don't rust!"—Indianapolis News.

Great California Industry.

Nearly a million acres are planted to the fruit trees that supply the canneries of California, according to Elton R. Shaw in an article in the Old Colony Magazine, the organ of the Old Colony club. Statistics tell us that of the 100,000,000 acres of land in the state of California, about 500,000 are devoted to fruit trees; so it is easily conceivable that the fruit-canning industry is no small part of the general industrial activities of the "Golden State."

LIGHT ON ANCIENT HISTORY

Some Interesting Data Bearing on the Strange People Known to Fame as the "Aeolians."

Evidently some one who had eaten a great deal of army corned beef in Europe wrote this amusing skit in the "Watch on the Rhine," remarks the Youth's Companion. The piece is headed, "Documents Published in the Year 2473 A. D. by an American Historian."

I have just been journeying along the Rhine gathering data on the ancient tribe of men known as the Aeolians. The origin of this strange people is one of the great mysteries of history. Likewise their sudden extinction has been just as baffling.

The Aeolians appeared in western Europe very suddenly about the time of the beginning of the Tertiary dark ages—the latter part of the second decade of the Twentieth century. For a short period they flooded in great numbers the entire territory of Gaul from the Pyrenees to the Rhine. Then they suddenly vanished.

It was recently thought that a clue had been found to the kind of food eaten by these nomads. In an old cellar in Andernach there were found what at first looked like peculiarly shaped bricks, but what later proved to be cans of a strange sort of meat.

Certain investigators soon decided that this could be nothing other than elephant meat, and students were about to make trips to Africa in search of further evidence, when the result of some chemical tests was published. This showed that the meat was at least 1007 years old, if not very much older; and as the Aeolians were in Gaul about 550 years ago, it is folly to believe that this store of food belonged to them. It is much more probable that it was left there at the time Hannibal and his soldiers and elephant supply trains made their long expedition against Rome.

It is probably a good thing for America that the mysterious disappearance of the Aeolians came about, for there is plenty of evidence that this barbaric race was planning to migrate to North America and establish itself on that continent permanently.

HISTORIC TREE NEARING END

Elm at Washington, Closely Associated With Samuel F. B. Morse, Will Soon Be Gone.

Another landmark in Washington is near destruction. The old "Morse Elm," under whose shade Samuel F. B. Morse used to spend his leisure hours, while working on his invention of the telegraph, will soon be removed. The tree was planted in 1820. In the early forties the future inventor of the telegraph used to foregather with his cronies and newspaper men and crack jokes about the "impossible" and "crazy" invention of the magnetic telegraph on which he was working. The tree was in front of the old Willard hotel.

Since those days the old hotel has been replaced by a modern eleven-story hotel. Morse, whose invention came true in 1844, died in 1872. But the tree remained.

But it is now in its death hour in spite of many operations of "tree surgery" and all known applications of "tree medicine" practiced by Washington's superintendent of city parks.

Houses of Mud.

Women in California are building houses with their own fair hands. What is more, they are making the bricks.

The bricks, however, are of the kind spoken of in the Bible as made by the people of Israel in Egypt—i. e., of clay earth mixed with straw for a binder. The straw is indispensable, and it will be remembered how the Israelites "kicked" because it was not provided.

Such bricks are merely sun baked. Missionary priests in California in the early days used them for building churches and other structures which covered with stucco, were very handsome. These "dobe" buildings were also substantial, weatherproof and enduring, as is testified by many that still stand, unimpaired by the wear of centuries.

With labor so high and materials likewise, the idea of a mud dwelling, which one can put up for oneself, even the children helping, has its attractions.

The Dress Problem in the Orient.

The Yokohama Reform association recently sent a communication to the mayor requesting his cooperation in endeavoring to prevent coolies and workmen appearing in public places with insufficient clothing to conform with western ideas of propriety. The association's spokesman stated that the reason for the request is the presence of a large number of foreigners in the city, and the sight of the scantily clothed persons on the streets and in the markets will tend to give them a favorable opinion of the city.—Tokyo Japan Advertiser.

Knocking a Tradition.

It is a tradition. Because the forefathers were rotten shots and couldn't kill a quail on a hot turkey day, all they could do for meat on a memorable day. They had been on a diet of clams so long that mayhap even turkey tasted like food to them, but that is no excuse for wishing the blamed thing onto posterity and making it a sacred duty to gnaw a bundle of concentrated fiddlestrings on the last Thursday of every November.—Topeka Capital.

Danger in Elephant Drive.
Driving elephants at night is a slow, trying, dangerous job. It means fighting every foot of the way through dense jungle and keeping up a continand hubbub of how-tos and whens, relates Charles Mayer, in Asia Magazine. The elephants wish to avoid the noise, and they move slowly away from it, crawling through the trees and vines. The men who are directly behind have the easiest time, for they can follow the trails broken by the elephants; those on the sides must cut trails with their parangs. No lights can be used, and care must be taken to avoid the little elephants, which roam about investigating the noise. If they see a man and give the danger sound, the entire herd stampedes.

The toys of Russia, speaking generally, are simple, often roughly fashioned and almost anonymous, like the wooden masks of dolls, of course, but an important and favorite group. In the rural districts they are generally of wood. In the wide agricultural districts of central Russia the little ones sometimes have dolls made of straw tied at the wrists, neck, and waist. In the forest regions dolls are sometimes made of moss, pine cones and birch bark. After dolls, the favorite objects seem to be horses, women, with raiment carved in relief and painted, and birds. Figures of men are less frequent, and when found are generally in company with their attack the horse.

You say a "bamboozing" table, put a good one for it, and then look at it, whether it is made of real bamboo. Red gum can be made to look so much like bamboo and the reason is that it is so often sold out of the other of these woods. Now, you tell the difference between a table and the trunk of a tree, and a Mississippi, S. S. Poplar, S. S. Gum, and S. S. Gum. If you can see the trees with the naked eye, then you will know that all is well. If you can't see the pores with the aid of a magnifying glass, then you will know that you are in the presence of red gum.

"I don't know whether I like those photos or not," said the young woman. "They seem rather indistinct." "You must remember, madam, that I am not a professional photographer."

Armored of ancient days often achieved fame for the quality of their metal suits, but their secrets are an open book in the light of modern metallurgical analysis and microscopy. Sections of iron cut from some 12 samples of old armor and examined by the United States bureau of standards revealed that a pure wrought iron was used, carbonized into steel by reheat treatment, hammered into sheets and welded together. The completed suit of armor, after shaping, was then hardened by quenching.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Nothing is to me more distasteful than that entire complacency and satisfaction which beam in the countenances of a newly married couple in that of the lady particularly; it tells you that her lot is disposed of in this world; that you can have no hopes of her. It is true I have none, nor wishes either, perhaps, but this is one of those truths which ought, as I said before, to be taken for granted, not expressed.—Charles Lamb.

Hunter Asserts That It Is Practically Impossible to Surprise the Mountain Sheep.

"The mountain sheep is one of the most difficult of all our American game to approach in the open," says Charles L. Smith in an article on the "Rocky Mountain Sheep in Boys' Life." "It has eyes like a telescope for keenness and can see over and make out a man farther away than any other animal of which I have any knowledge, and when it considers the need it has been feeding, it will sometimes sit or more standing on some prominent point where they can get a view of the surrounding country. I know of no more inspiring sight than one of the old rams with its massive horns pointing against the sky, standing as majestically as a sentry. And it is a wonder to the hunter how they get across the rock slopes with such ease and grace. There has been much writing of the mountain sheep, of its wonderful feats of springing from ledges and leaping upon its head and horns, which is well out foundation in fact. While it is true they can stand an incredible shock in battle, yet if one of these sheep weighing 300 pounds should drop from a ledge of any considerable height and fall on his head his neck would be broken. I spent several years in the Sheep country in the Canadian Rockies and was near the Stamp or among them during all seasons of the year and they seem to be less sensitive to the rigors of winter and the ever-buzzing elements of the high altitudes than any other animal except possibly the mountain goat, and of these animals I think they have the advantage, because I have a number of times found mountain goats garbled in the deep snow in places where food was scarce, but I have never yet found a mountain sheep in this condition."

Institution in England Had Its Inception in the Shortage of Houses and Housemaids.

A small private hotel for babies is the latest idea of domestic life. The baby gets a change and the mother gets a rest.

The baby's hotel or boarding house is the product of the shortage of houses and furnishings. Parents have been forced into hotels and furnished apartments, and as many hotels have not the conveniences of the nursery, the baby's hotel, where he or she may be received as a paying guest, is making its appearance. There is, of course, accommodation for the baby carriage.

Two certified nurses conceived the idea. They have established a nursery in Hampstead, London. The walls are decorated with ducks and chickens, and each little guest has a white cot with curtains. A medical man and a dentist are in attendance. The rate is about $12 a week. The little guests may stay a week, a year, or merely for the week end, while their parents go house hunting or holiday making.

"A young war widow, who has resumed her former post as secretary, brought her baby to the nursery, and Saturday afternoon and Sunday they spend happy hours together, while another woman left her little one in our charge while she joined her husband in the tropics."—Confidential News.

Italy and neighboring countries, especially Switzerland, at the end of October held at Milan a conference on child welfare in which, more specifically, seaside and country homes for needy children, placement of children in foreign countries; vacation camps; also provision of instructional care in cities; state, local and international organization of child welfare; better training of social workers engaged in child welfare service, and improvement of technique generally.

The public welfare department of the city of Milan, which called this conference, is especially concerned over the duplication of efforts, the lack of proper care in the smaller communities and interaction between town and country. One definite aim is that of making international co-operation in this field a means of encouraging closer relationship between the peoples.

Later arrivals at Vancouver, B. C., from the Yukon report that wandering herds of caribou are appearing in immense numbers on the banks of that river. They declare there are millions of the animals. Two men who tried to go down the river just at the time the first ice were held up for three hours by a multitude of caribou which were crossing the river below them. How long the migration had been going on when they were stopped they did not know. The stream of animals blackened the water on a space one-half mile wide and continued uninterrupted during the period the men were held up.

The Egyptian government has decided to build what is officially described as "the finest and most complete medical school and hospital in the world," in Cairo. It is to contain 1,225 beds, and will have accommodation for 3,000 out-patients a day. Attached will be a completely equipped medical school, which will be connected with the projected university, a special dental department, and departments for every branch of medical and surgical science.

Catalonia in History.

Catalonia, under the name of Hispania Tarraconensis, constituted a part of Roman Spain. It was invaded and subdued by the Alans, and, after them, by the Goths, who gave the country the name of Gothia. In the eighth century the Arabs changed the name of Gothia to Catalonia.
In the eighth century the Arabs gained possession of the southern part.
When Charlemagne, in 788, subjugated Spain as far as the Ebro river, Catalonia formed the central portion of the Spanish empire, governed by Frankish counts who had Barcelona as their residence. They soon made themselves independent of France. In 1151 Earl Ramon Berenguer, by his marriage with the Princess Petronilla (1137), united Catalonia with Aragon, to the future greatness of which Catalonia contributed in a very great measure by reason of its wealth and the influence wielded by the citizens of Barcelona, its capital, in the western Mediterranean.

Wise Advice for Employees.

Keep, if possible, your work done far enough ahead so that you can afford to take a few days off it, because of a sudden illness, you need the rest that will prevent its becoming a serious one. Then make your fellow-employees with your capital, a reputation for strength and competence that will insure your job during a full business which necessitates the laying off a part of the force. Remember that while it is true that to save money it is equally important to save energy and capacity, both of which have a monetary value. Disposition, careless, haphazard to your work, all out down your factor of safety, and make it more difficult for you to weather a storm. John Blake, in Chicago Daily News.

The Perfect Man.

A young king once asked a sage what kind of person he considered was the most perfect, whom it would be wise if all men would imitate. "The most perfect man," said the wise old man, "is not he who seems most perfect, but he who not only is able to discover that he is imperfect, but also strives through life to amend his faults as much as possible."

She Works Fast.

My most embarrassing moment was one time when a young girl I was supposed to marry asked me to buy her a mink fur. I told her to wait awhile. Next time I saw her she was wearing a mink fur coat and told me she had met another young man who bought it for her, and was engaged to marry her. Chicago Tribune.

Sugar Gives Off Sparks.

A queer phenomenon has recently come to the notice of Washington scientists. Disks of loaf sugar mounted on a rapidly rotating lathe while a hammer beat lightly against them were seen to give off a continuous light that has not been satisfactorily explained.

Wanted Doctor in a Hurry.

Richard broke two bones in his leg.
When his father went to the telephone to summon a doctor the little chap said: "Please, daddy, tell the doctor to come in a flying machine instead of his auto so he can come quick, 'cause it hurts me so."

Speaking of Manna.

The friends of a certain first-day school were astonished at the text given by a small girl, who in a tone of great earnestness repeated during the closing exercises: "Ye cannot serve God and mamma."—Friends' Intelligencer.

Two Meanings in Dream.

To dream of a flood where houses and people are carried away foretells great disaster, loss in business and mental weakness, unless you swim out of the flood, when it signifies power and wealth.

Jewsharp's Origin Hard to Trace.

The Jewsharp is not a harp, and it has no connection with the Jews. The reason for the name is not known.
Some authorities believe that it was originally called a jawsharp because it was played with the jaw. Others say it was first called the Jew's Trumpet, the name coming from the French word "jeu"—a "jeu-trumpet" or joy trumpet. Other peoples called it a mouth-drum or a humming-iron while the Italians designated it as the "scaccia pensiere," banisher of thought. The actual origin of the instrument, which is a universal sound-producer, is not known. It is known to be of very ancient origin, for the Chinese books of the twelfth century show the Jewsharp as almost identical with the European form.

Best Way to Cut Cardboard.

Cardboard is used for so many purposes that it is well to know how to cut straight edges. Never use scissors for the purpose, because that makes ragged edges. First lay a brass-edged ruler on the cardboard with brass edge upward. As the ruler is beveled, the brass will be a fraction of an inch above the board when properly placed. Now procure a very sharp penknife, hold the ruler firmly, and draw the knife along the beveled edge. Do not attempt to cut through the cardboard the first time, but merely score it deeply. Now remove the ruler and cut through the material.
The result will be as clean a cut edge as a picture dealer can make on his mat.

Vectis and Mona Islands.

Vectis is the Roman name of the Isle of Wight, an island in the English channel, belonging to Hampshire, England, separated from the mainland by the channels of Solent and Spit-head. It is reversed by a range of chalk downs, and is noted for picturesque scenery. Its area is 145 square miles. Mona is the Latin name of Anglesey, Anglesey, or Anglesea, is an island and county of North Wales, which lies northwest of the mainland from which it is separated by Mersey strait. It was an ancient seat of the Druids, was conquered by the Romans under Suetonius Paulinus in 61 A. D., and by Aethelfrith in 78. Later it became a Welsh stronghold.

Queer Siamese Customs.

The Siamese believe that the arteries are filled with air, and that diseases are caused by deranged functioning of this air. After the birth of a child the mother has to lie 30 days roasting in front of a hot fire. When a man gets sick he calls in a doctor and agrees with him on a fixed sum for a cure. If he dies, or fails to get well, the doctor gets nothing. The dead are kept for from two days to nine months, depending on their rank in life before they are cremated. The Siamese language is a difficult tongue for a European to learn, as it has five tones. The alphabet has 44 characters and 20 vowel signs.

The Child's Character.

So then, you have the child's character in these four things—Humility, Faith, Charity and Cheerfulness.
That's what you have to be converted to. "Except ye be converted and become as little children"—You hear much of conversion now-a-days; but people always seem to think they have got to be made wretched by conversion—to be converted to long faces.
No, friends, you have got to be converted to short ones; you have to repent into childhood, to repent into delight, and delight-omeness.—John Ruskin.

It's an Old Chinese Way.

There are some doctors who never take sick patients. Their work is to aid the well to keep well. They call themselves "Preventivists" and have set up as practitioners in preventive medicine.

Why Weak Glands Make People "Cranky"

Scientists tell us that our glands govern the building up of the billions of cells in our muscles and nerves, and that when we are nervous, irritable, "cranky," depressed or given to worrying it is an indication that our glands are run-down.
The thing to do is to build them up.
One preparation which thousands of people are now using with splendid results is Glandex Compound. This contains sheep and cattle gland extracts which help supply the elements lacking in run-down human glands. The success of Glandex Compound in treating nervous diseases is surprising. The first few treatments usually bring decided results, and soon the nerves are once as strong and calm as ever. Glandex Compound is sold at all drug stores. Your money back if not perfectly satisfied with results.

A CHARLEROI INTERVIEW

Mrs. Velletty Tells Her Experience.

The following brief account of an interview with a Charleroi woman five years ago, and its sequel will be read with keen interest by every citizen.

Mrs. Louis Velletty, 205 Prospect Ave., Charleroi, says: "I was troubled for years with swelling around my ankles and feet and found it hard to get around. A dull heavy pain in the small of my back made it hard for me to do my housework. Mornings I would wake up very sore and found great difficulty in bending or moving in any way. Rheumatic pains shot all through me and I often had a tired draggy feeling. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and purchased a box at Piper's Pharmacy. After taking two boxes of this medicine I was relieved. I still take Doan's occasionally and they keep me feeling fine." (Statement given Jan. 29, 1914.)

On December 7, 1913, Mrs. Velletty said: "I haven't had to use Doan's Kidney Pills lately and I tell everyone I hear complaining of their kidneys to try Doan's."

COUGHING SPELLS

Stop Them Before The Inflammation Becomes Dangerous

Coughing is far worse than merely annoying to the person afflicted and everybody else within hearing. It means that the membranes of the throat and lungs have become raw and inflamed. Besides weakening you, it exposes the system to dread diseases like Pneumonia and Diphtheria.

Take no chances with a cough. Bathe the throat and chest with warm water and dry thoroughly in order to get the pores well open. Apply Krew-Pina and work in by brisk rubbing—it will blister. Melt a little in a pan over a fire and inhale the medicinal vapors. Repeat these applications until relieved.

Krew-Pina is the tremendously successful household ointment, prepared by a scientific formula from natural home remedies, including Oil of Peppermint and other volatile oils, in a petroleum base. Use as directed in cases of bronchitis, croup, sore throat, rheumatism, soreness, bruises, cuts, scalds, and all home remedies, including all of them at your druggist's—30c and 60c.

Free Sample of Krew-Pina will be sent to any address on request. THE KREW-PINA CO., INC., WAYNESBURG, PA.

PLACE HAS CHARM

Old City of Bagdad Is Luring to the Eyes.

Once Within its Streets. However, Much of Its Interest Is Lost—Types of Almost Every Race There.

Bagdad from outside is alluring. At first there is only a foreground of flat desert, and in the distance a lovely rampart of palm trees. Then almost suddenly one sees some forty blue and yellow domes and minarets defined against an azure sky. Maude Radford Warren writes in the Saturday Evening Post.

This skyline is the most beautiful thing about the city. It one looks at dawn or at sunset across the rapid, noisy Tigris, one sees the most beautiful colors, delicate or strong, pink and pale green, hard orange and gold, with the palm fronds embroidered against them. At dawn there is the deep crooning of doves, and at sunset the muffled voices of the people crossing the pontoon bridges and the women and children sitting on the steps that lead down to the water, telling over the events of the day, as the men in the bazars tell over their under heads. Even when one enters the streets and bazzars some of the mystery remains, though a good deal of the subtlety goes.

In the bazaar, that place of clashing variety, of overbrilliant color, one can see every type of eastern face; one can hear in the course of a few minutes speech in Arabic, Turkish, Kurdish, Armenian, Persian, French and English. Then one can leave this seething life and go out into the desert, out into the blue, as they call it here, and see nothing but space, heat, and feel only silence. Away on the horizon there may be a line of palm trees or a little cluster of cloth-covered domes; there may be a herd of donkeys that one takes for camels, so deceptive are the distances, or perhaps a mirage will suddenly open a marvelous vista of lakes and islands remote and lovely.

But all this is a lure for the traveler. The Westerner who lives in Mesopotamia must see it with other eyes. The man or woman who works here must care tremendously for his job or else for the country which deserves the job. A woman who comes with her husband must care tremendously for him. For country clubs and tennis and polo and races do not disguise the fact that to stay here is to exist rather than to live. Dust or mud in the winter and infernal heat in the summer; thousands of men without homes.

No one uses the word "home" here. They say "billet." A British child is a rarity. I know of two men who have children of five years of age whom they have never seen. I have met men whose leaves of absence are overdue, but as long as they are in enough to do their work they can't be spared. Good men are scarce. A man's best chance of getting leave is to break down.

But they carry on amazingly, especially through the months of gasping heat, when from eight to five no soldier is supposed to do any work; when even the animals must do nothing; when people must wear their pith helmets and spine pads all day; when men out in the blue lie panting in their tents longing for night to come; when the most important piece of knowledge is the location of the best stroke station.

Two mining engineers were discussing deep mine shafts, and one had told in glowing terms about mines in which he had worked.

"Jump into my car and I'll show you a regular mine," said the other.

Arriving at the mine they saw the noisome engine revolving at a terrific rate. The engineer was asleep. Rushing to the sleeping man, they cried:

"Wake up man! You'll pull the cage through the roof!"

"What day is this?" the engineer asked, sleepily.

"It's Tuesday, but stop the engine quick!"

"Ah, z'wan," he replied, disgustedly, settling himself back in his chair. "She won't be up till Friday."—Science and Invention.

Most Important

Mrs. A. L. Allen, the Freudian philosopher, said in a lecture in Chicago:

"I know a young mother who once decided to impart some of the mysteries of childbirth to her nine-year-old daughter, so she took the child aside and explained to her with hushed reverence that the stork has nothing to do with the coming of little strangers, that the baby is never found under a cabbage in the garden and that the doctor never brings him in a bag. 'The little girl was very much impressed. At the end of the discourse she put her arms around her mother's neck and whispered:

"Mother, have you told daddy about this, too?"—Los Angeles Times.

Business Instinct

Teddy came home from the photographer's with a dozen pictures of himself tucked under his arm.

Proudly he handed them to his mother. "What you going to do with so many, mother?" he said.

"Give them to different friends, Teddy."

"I wouldn't give 'em away, mother. I'd sell 'em."

"MAGIC" IN TACT

Nothing So Thoroughly Oils the Wheels of Life.

This Old World Would Be a Better Place If More People Would Cultivate the Quality.

Tact oils the machinery of life, declares a writer in London Answers. Without it the world would be a very different thing; it would still go round, certainly, but with what a creaking and jolting in every part!

Tact probably has more imitators than anything else; evasion, dishonesty, white lies, all these and many more masquerade under its name, yet tact, in the true sense, is as unlike them as gold is from brass.

Spurious tact is detestable. The woman who "manages" people, who boasts that "anything can be done with a little tact," usually possesses none. Real tact is spontaneous; a child can have it; indeed, many sensitive children are exquisitely tactful.

It is a blend of unselfishness, imagination, and nice feeling, these three. Men and women may be extremely self-sacrificing, yet utterly tactless, through their complete inability to put themselves in other people's places.

Who doesn't know the man who drops the most appalling "bricks," simply because he lacks imagination, and can't see how it will affect the feelings of his friends? He often, in fact, generally is, the most good-natured man possible, but lacks the precious quality of tact.

Some people are deliberately tactless. These are divided into two classes:

First, there is the blunt, straightforward man, who takes pride in "calling a spade a spade," and condemns any camouflage of this useful implement, however truthfully it may be done, as finicking and insincere. Then there are the callously indifferent; those who study no one but themselves. They say what they like whenever it pleases them, totally oblivious to the feelings of their friends.

In the old fairy tales we read of the prince who had a marvelous pair of spectacles, which enabled him to read the thoughts of all those round him. Quite a lot of people possess this magic gift today, except that we have a different name for it. How often we hear "So-and-so is such a comfortable, restful sort of person; everything she undertakes is a success."

Why? Because, without sinking any of her own individuality, she has the knack of adapting herself to everybody she meets. A beautiful woman shines in any place. If the background is lovely, too, she harmonizes with it; if ugly, it acts as a foil.

So it is with tact. Fairy tales are a thing of the past, but this one magic quality is still left to us.

Navajos Now Blanket Making.

One of the war-time luxuries already declining in price is the Navajo blanket, says a Phoenix, Ariz., dispatch to the Christian Science Monitor. For several years past the Indians almost abandoned the weaving of their famous blankets. It was found that much more profit could be secured by direct sale of the wool to eager eastern buyers. But the wool market has tumbled, especially in consideration of wool of poor quality such as comes from the reservation sheep. The Indians never have attended to keeping up the breed of their wool producers, though the white men who range flocks around the reservation produce wool of high grade. The stocks of Navajo blankets now are well absorbed and the Indians are setting up their old looms and are bending toward production as never before.

Modern ideas always did worry grandpa, but none more so than the advent of the ice cream cone. He first encountered the cone in a railway station last week. He carefully ate the ice cream and placed the crisp receptacle by the side of the bench. His son, a few moments later, appeared, eating a cone.

"Why, Mort," he exclaimed, "you ain't eating the vessel, too, are you? Why, you know I thought that was to be saved and I turned mine upside down here by the bench so they could come along and get it."

Tactful Small Boy.

Jack had a baby sister whom he regarded as the most beautiful creature on earth. When she was six months old a friend of his mother's also had a baby daughter. Jack was taken to see this new baby and asked what he thought of her. Trying not to hurt anyone's feelings and still be polite about this baby, who, in his eyes, couldn't compare with his sister, he said:

"Well, she looks like a home-made baby."

Not Much for a Quarter.

A friend of mine had some perfume I liked and I asked her what it was called. writes a correspondent. A few days later I went into a shop to purchase some, and asked the clerk for a quarter's worth of it. He looked at me, laughed, and said: "Why, a quarter of an ounce costs $1.15."

None of That Kind Left.

Jud Tunkins says he hates to seem old fashioned, but he would like to meet one of those back-number landlords who got nervous when a tenant threatened to move unless the flat was newly papered.
